

Vudor Porch Shades

are made for comfort and long service.

THE light, strong, flexible strips of wood are about 7/8 of an inch wide. They are held together by a warp of heavy seine twine. Seine twine is used because it is very strong and does not rot with wetting. That's why this same twine is used in making fish nets. The twine is woven with a special Vudor patented lock stitch, which holds the strips immovable. They do not slip out at the ends and become broken, as is the case with cheap bamboo shades.

Vudor Porch Shades outlast many seasons. One of the greatest advantages of Vudor shades is the fact that they keep out the sun and the gaze of passers-by—yet let in all the light and air you want. You can see out, but others can't see in. This is because of the size of this seine twine and the way in which the wooden strips are spaced.

It is a Vudor feature and is the result of much experimenting until finding just the right way to bind and space the strips. Even the raising cords of Vudor Porch Shades are of special manufacture. These cords do not curl nor loop up and stick in the pulley—an annoyance that you have probably experienced with other shades and screens.

Mrs. Pierce is a great aunt of Mrs. Waterman, and she is making her first visit to Barre in twenty years. She is 81 years old and remarkably vigorous for one who has passed the four-score mark.

One of the season's heaviest rainstorms came at the heels of an unusually warm day yesterday and as a result of the storm, country highways are reported to have been badly damaged in places. According to reports brought to the city to-day, the hill roads to the east and west of Barre were rendered nearly impassable to automobiles as in some instances the rain washed the entire bed away. Here in the city the effect of the storm was not so damaging although side streets and gravel sidewalks were deeply gouged in spots. A second heavy shower this morning did not tend to improve conditions locally and the street department will be busy patching streets and sidewalk depressions for several days.

A sprinkling of Barre golfers were in the Lake Caspian team from Greenboro that played the Old Pine club in St. Johnsbury Saturday. The Greensboro golfers were defeated by the score of 9 to 4.

Mrs. George Blanchard of Concord, N. H., and Mrs. F. M. Bessey of Zanesville, O., who have been visiting at the homes of Mrs. C. W. Merrill and Mrs. J. E. Mackenzie, returned to their home yesterday. Mr. Bessey, who accompanied them to this city, will remain a few days.

Miss Margaret Johnston of Blackwell street, who is taking a vacation from her duties in the office of Cook & Watkins, and Miss Margaret Dowers, left this morning for Highgate Springs, where they are to spend 10 days in camp on Missisquoi bay. Miss Dowers is taking her annual vacation from the cashier's office at the Smith & Cummings store.

Miss May Smith, who gave Boston as her residence, was arrested on Granite street yesterday by Officer John J. Murley, who locked her up at police headquarters on an intoxication charge. Soon after her arrival at the station, the young woman became seriously ill and Dr. P. S. Duffy, the city physician, was called. It was on the doctor's advice that the prisoner was removed to the City hospital for treatment. At the hospital to-day it was thought that Miss Smith would be able to leave the institution sometime this evening, when she will probably be arraigned before Magistrate H. W. Scott in city court. But little is known of the Smith woman, except that she is a transient who has been staying on Granite street for several days. She says she is 26 years old.

HENDRICK ACTED ALONE.

Judge at Thaw Sanity Trial Not Moved by Jury's Verdict.

New York, Aug. 2.—Harry K. Thaw was declared sane by Supreme Court Justice Peter A. Hendrick, independently of the advisory jury's verdict to the same effect, according to correspondence between the justice, Attorney-General Woodbury, and Davis Robinson, foreman of the jury, made public at Albany on Saturday night at the attorney-general's office.

Therefore, Mr. Woodbury announced, the statements attributed to Robinson—that the justice's charge was disregarded by the jury and "that the natural law" or the unwritten law operated to influence the verdict—will have no bearing on the state's appeal from the Hendrick decision. The Robinson letter denies the accuracy of the statements.

"My belief is," the Hendrick letter read, "that the verdict of the jury expressed the true thought of all the members of the jury that Thaw was sane at the time of the trial. I would be disposed in any event to investigate the matter were it not that the verdict of the jury was advisory only, and that independent of the jury's findings, I believe that upon the evidence adduced upon the trial no decision could be reached other than that Thaw is sane."
